I came into this world on a cold dark night, under a thatched roof, in the small village of Gobindpura, tehsil Kot Addu in Muzaffargarh district, now in Pakistan. Till today I do not know the exact date or time of my birth. Such details were of little consequence in those days. My mother Chawali Kaur, was a simple woman, who was devoted to her husband and children. I can still conjure up memories of her sitting at the chakki, grinding wheat to make rotis to feed us. My brothers, Amir, Daulat and Makhan, and sisters, Makhani, Hoondi and Isher, were older than me, while Gobind was the youngest. Amir, the eldest among us eight siblings, was fifteen years older than me. We lived in a basic, two-roomed mud house-- one room was shelter for the cattle and storeroom for the fodder, While the other was our living quarters. During the day, my brothers worked in the fields with father, tilling the land, sowing seeds and harvesting crops. Gobind and I, being the youngest were allowed to spend the day playing with the other village lads. At dusk, we would return home and the entire family would gather around our mother who would lovingly feed us with piping hot rotis with generous dollop of ghee.
